PERSONALITY, IDEALS, BONDS, FLAWS

Personality: I never accept that I'm out of my depth.

I'm quick to jump to extreme solutions. Why risk a lesser option not working?

Ideals: Obsession. I've lived this way for so long that I can't imagine another way.

Bonds: I use my cunning mind to solve mysteries and find justice for those who've been wronged.

I lost someone I care about, but I still see them in guilty visions, recurring dreams, or as a spirit.

Flaws: I'm too naive and end up getting used sometimes. When I find out, it makes me sad. I need to learn to be more careful about other people...

CAMPAIGN NOTES

Backstory: Neesk grew up with her dad and grandparents

Her grandparents keep telling tales about how their ancestors first came to that plane before the Cracking, and how they helped during that time using an old artifact that was lost.

She never knew her mother and has no memory of her and the rest of her family never wanted to talk about what happened.

Growing up with those tales of missing artifacts and other mysteries, she always loved trying to find mysteries and adventures around her hometown, but she's never been good at it.

Her dad never approved of it. He wanted her to train and took the tailor family business after him.

When she got old enough she fled and try to find more information about that possible artifact. But being a changeling led to a lot of people not trusting her, she then mainly used the persona of Laroamae, a half-elf, when she doesn't need to be someone else.

Making a name of herself for her with her small investigation talent she was able to travel a bit on Niumactus.

Possessions: poorly wrought maps from your homeland that depict where you are in Faern

a small piece of jewelry worth 10 gp in the style of your homeland's craftsmanship
